

plants open their pores for carbon dioxide and lose water to evaporation water vapor cools and changes back into liquid form water, driven by the heat of the sun, changes into vapor and rises into the air

